PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

I welcome the Australian team and Management to New Zealand, along with Australian Soccer Federation Commissioners and other distinguished guests.

It is vital for football in the South Pacific that either New Zealand or Australia progress to the World Cup Finals, as the financial and other benefits will enable further development of the game in our region.

Today will see many players from both sides who have had playing experience in Europe and Britain, which is a far cry from years gone by. It signifies to me that, whilst the game may be slow in developing by comparison with other countries where football is its national game, both Australia and New Zealand are now more than capable of producing world-class players.

This alone should result in a fine spectacle of football today.

It is not protocol to favour one side or another, but in these circumstances, I feel it is appropriate to suggest a win by our home side would be a great boost for soccer in New Zealand.I am confident, however, that Ian Marshall and his team will provide the New Zealand public with much of which to be proud. Whatever the result, I trust the game will bring honour to the participants, and further glory to the world's most popular sport.

Terry J Killalea
President

CHAIRMAN'S MESSAGE

On behalf of the New Zealand Football Association, I would like to warmly welcome the Australian National team and their officials to New Zealand for the first of the two matches in the final Oceania qualifying round of the FIFA World Cup Finals to be played in the USA in 1994.

Australia and New Zealand are traditional rivals in all fields of endeavour, and soccer is no exception. The two countries have played each other many times in recent years with results that are often contrary to the expectations of supporters in both countries. There is no doubt that Australia has achieved a high level of success in recent FIFA World Championships, and many of its players are now playing successfully at the highest level for European clubs. This is therefore once again an opportunity for New Zealand to compare its standards with those of Australia, and we are looking forward to two highly competitive games of soccer.

The two games will bring the planning and development of a four-year programme undertaken by both countries to a climax. For the Oceania winner, the subsequent path to qualify for the Finals, with firstly games against Canada, and then against a South American team, will be most difficult. However, we believe the standard of football in Oceania has risen in recent years, and we are confident that the winning team from this region will provide worthy competition.

On behalf of all New Zealand soccer supports, I would like to wish Ian Marshall, Captain Malcolm Dunford and his team the very best of luck for both these vital games against Australia.

On behalf of the NZFA and its members, it is appropriate that we record our appreciation of the support given by our major sponsor Winfield Limited. There is no doubt that without this backing, the aim of New Zealand to qualify for the 1994 World Cup would be much more difficult. Winfield's support in backing the tours to New Zealand by England in 1991, and by Werder Bremen and the Dutch Amateur team in 1992 has provided a very significant part of the development of the current All Whites' squad.

Harry Dods
Chairman

WELCOME

SPONSOR'S MESSAGE

Winfield Limited is delighted to welcome players, officials and spectators to Mount Smart for the New Zealand leg of the Oceania Region's World Cup Qualifying Series.

Trans Tasman competition in any code provides for intense rivalry, while the added incentive of progressing further in World Cup Qualifying fixtures combines to ensure we will witness an exciting spectacle today. As the major sponsor of this fixture we are especially pleased to welcome the Australian Socceroos and we are sure it will provide a hard fought and enjoyable match.

Winfield Limited trusts the build-up matches we supported recently have been of major benefit to Ian Marshall and his Winfield All Whites and wish it every success today and next week in Melbourne.

We extend our appreciation to the New Zealand Football Association for inviting us to be part of this campaign, to the match officials we trust your role is made easy and to the supporters we reiterate our best wishes for an exciting spectacle today.

WORLD CUP '94 USA

It is often difficult for New Zealanders who have been raised on a diet of rugby, racing and beer to fully understand the tremendous impact of and following for the game of soccer internationally. Sport internationally, and soccer in particular, provides not only recreation for the population but also has a major impact on both the social life and economy of most of the world's nations.

Association football, or soccer as we term it is controlled internationally by FIFA (the Federation Internationale de Football Association) which currently has a membership of some 178 national associations. Although it does not directly control competition within the boundaries of the national association, FIFA nonetheless imposes very strict codes as part of a national association's membership of it. For example only one controlling body will be recognised in any country and the laws of the Game are regularly updated and promulgated by FIFA.

As the international controlling body for the sport FIFA has also established a unique range of world championship events - six in all - which clearly reflect the widespread interest in and following for the sport. These events include -

The FIFA World Cup - held every four years.

The Olympic Football Tournament - held every four years as part of the Olympic Games and currently restricted to players under 23 years of age.

The FIFA Under-20 World Championship for the FIFA/Coca Cola Cup held every two years.

The FIFA Under-17 World Championship for the FIFA/JVC Cup - held every two years.

The FIFA World Championship for Women's Football - held every four years.

The FIFA World five-a-side (Indoor) World Championship - held every four years.

For any country the qualifying path to the Finals requires a series of playoffs within its regional Confederation, except for the host nation. This path is often the cause of considerable concern and for countries such as New Zealand has meant major costs and time commitment. Few will forget the need for the All Whites to play a total of 15 qualifying matches in 1981 and 1982 before securing a place in the Finals in Spain.

For the 1994 World Cup to be played in the USA qualifying matches commenced in 1992 with the entries and finals berths being:

Europe/Israel
39 entries with 13 teams to qualify (including Germany).

Africa
37 entries with 3 teams to qualify.

Asia
29 entries with 2 teams to qualify.

Concacaf
23 entries with 2 or 3 teams to qualify (including the USA).

Oceania
7 entries with 0 or 1 team to qualify.

Conmebol
9 entries with 3 or 4 teams to qualify.

With two nations, Germany as the Cup holders, and USA as the host nation, assured of a place in the Finals, the task of qualifying for the remaining 22 places is now well underway.

It will be noted that three confederations have the possibility of an additional qualifier and this arises primarily through the qualifying path that has been determined for the Oceania winner (either Australia or New Zealand).

The Oceania winner must play the second-placed team in Concacaf (which we now know as Canada) in a home/away series. The winner of that series then plays the fourth-placed South American (Conmebol) team, also on a home/away basis, to determine the participant in the finals.

Once all qualifying nations are known, the draw for group play will be conducted by FIFA. This draw, to be held in Las Vegas on 19 December 1993, will undoubtedly attract worldwide interest. Only when this is completed can the qualifying nations know the location of their matches within the USA.■

94's 'THE AIM'

Early in 1990, the New Zealand Football Association formalised an agreement with its major sponsor, Winfield Limited, that would provide both funding assistance and focus for the daunting task of qualifying for the 1994 FIFA World Cup. With the game in New Zealand still looking to recapture the "dizzy heights" of the 1982 World Cup Finals. The theme: "94's THE AIM" was adopted, and this became the slogan for a comprehensive build-up programme for the All Whites.

This programme commenced in January 1990 with three matches in the Kings Cup Tournament in Bangkok. It was followed later in the year with matches in New Zealand - three against the top Russian Club Moscow Lokomotiv (a drawn series), and two matches against China P.R. - the nation New Zealand had to finally beat to qualify for Spain '82.

1991 was the centenary year of the NZFA and although only four matches were played by the All Whites that year, they were high profile matches involving a home and away series against Australia (in a revival of the Trans Tasman Series) and two matches against England. (It was the first time that the A team of The Football Association had toured New Zealand.)

By 1992 the team composition was becoming increasingly stable and an eight match tour of the Great Britain was to provide several highlights, including New Zealand's first-ever wins on British soil. Key "scalps" in this tour were Glasgow Celtic (1-0) and Football League club Brighton and Hove Albion.

Further ambitious build-up matches toward the World Cup Qualifying matches followed with two more home series - three matches against Werder Bremen (European Cup Winners Cup holders) and two matches against the Netherlands Amateur national team (as part of the Abel Tasman Commission activities). This preparation enabled the All Whites to comfortably win Group 2 of the Oceania qualifying matches with victories over Vanuatu of 4-1 (away) and 8-0 (home), and Fiji 3-0 (home with a 0-0 draw away).

Australia, comfortably won Group 1 with victories over Tahiti and the Solomon Islands, to provide for a real "showdown" when the two countries meet in the "Oceania Final" on 30 May (Auckland) and 6 June (Melbourne). Whoever wins the Trans Tasman encounter still has a major task to qualify for the World Cup Finals, as next they must beat Canada and then the fourth-placed team from South America.

The All Whites' complete record to date in the "94's THE AIM" programme has been:

30 Jan '90 NZ 1 Rotor Volgograd 2 (F. de Jong) in Bangkok

Five-A-Side football
The new challenge

Over many years, the traditional game of 11-a-side football has been modified to suit the circumstances of the participants.

From the streets of metropolitan centres to the complex indoor stadia, there has emerged a new, fast and exciting "court version" of the sport which is now embodied under a composite set of Laws of the Game for Five-a-side Football.

No longer is there a need for rules to be made up by the participants, and the NZFA have now formally adopted the FIFA Laws of the Game for Five-a-side Football, and is now actively involved in promoting this version of soccer.

The game is played either indoors or outdoors, in an area very much the size of a tennis court or a basketball court. Key features of the game involve:

1. The pitch - between 25-42 metres in length, and 15-25 metres in width, with penalty areas being an arc circle 6 metres from each goalpost.
2. Goals - 3 metres in width, cross bar 2 metres from ground.
3. Ball - size 4 ball, i.e. between 62-66 cm.
4. Players - five per team, including one goalkeeper. Up to 6 substitutes permitted. Any number of substitutes may be made on a "flying" basis.

The referee exercises his role from outside the pitch.

Duration of game - normally two halves of 25 minutes each.

When the ball is out of play, play is re-started by a kick-in, as distinct from a throw-in for 11-a-side.

A range of fouls and misconduct laws provide for penalties very much in line with the 11-a-side game.

Penalty kicks - taken from a penalty spot 6 metres from goal.

Corner kicks are awarded in similar manner to the 11-a-side game.

Five-a-side football provides soccer with an exciting alternative, which is able to be played by all ages including very young children, and in conditions which are not affected by weather.

A memorable match

Ceri Evans reflects...

NEW ZEALAND 3, ISRAEL 1
Mount Smart Stadium, Auckland, 26/10/85

Never has a New Zealand side had such a busy domestic year. In all, the All Whites played 22 matches, some against local sides, but there were matches against the England club Newcastle United, with a World Cup campaign the highlight right at the end of the season. And like the lead-in to Spain it looked for a time as though the dizzy heights of four years earlier may be repeated. What might have happened if English referee Keith Hackett had allowed what seemed a perfectly legitimate Wynton Rufer goal against Australia in the first game. That might have made the score 1-0 instead of a 0-0 final. But there was one campaign match that it produced one of the best international results of modern times. It was a game rich in drama and quality. Israel were no slugs. Inkeeper Bonni Ginsburg, detender Avi Cohen and striker Ronnie Rosenthal it had players who then and now, are good enough to play first division English football This day at Auckland, though, Rufer goaled after three minutes and while Ameli levelled, Mal Dunford had the Kiwis back in front before half-time There was only one goal in the second half. It was a superb, teasing, swirling effort from the sideline delivered bv Colin Walker. "It was,' wrote Soccer Annual Editor Vic Deverill, "a goal that would have been talked about for weeks had it been scored at either Anfield or Old Trafford."

One of the lynchpins in the New Zealand side that dav was Ceri Evans, a young man whose career has been paralleled to that of All Black captain David Kirk. Evans has quite a football pedigree. His father Gwyn, a Welshman, arrived in New Zealand in 1963 after having a long and distinguished playing career which included some 10 vears with Crvstal Palace. Evans senior was the rock around which a verv successful Christchurch United side was founded. After years of playing, Evans turned to administration and became the Secretarv General of the New Zealand Football Association. Ceri Evans played much of his junior football in Nelson and served that club, Wellington Diamond United Dunedin Citv and Christchurch United. Like Kirk, he pursued a medical career, attained the honour of becoming a Rhodes Scholar to Oxford Universitv and while there won a soccer blue. But that was not his onlv reward. The Oxford United club saw fit to make him a regular in its side and in 1990 he was very much on the club's books. Evans has been a New Zealand regular since 1984 and in 1987 was Plaver of the Year. His abilitv as a defender has never been questioned

Australia won that World Cup qualifying competition by three points from Israel and New Zealand but it could have been so different especially if that goal had been allowed

"I remember the incident well ' Evans said. "It was a fast break and a free kick was awarded against the keeper. We took it quickly, Colin Walker slipped the ball to Wynton who scored. The goal was disallowed because the ball was not stationarv when the kick was taken but we got the video of the game and it shows quite clearly the hand on the ball. It was quite frustrating."

From there New Zealand scored a brace of easy wins against the Chinese-Taipei side before the first game with Israel, who by then had lost, then drawn with Australia. The loss had come at home, but then they had a good draw in Australia.

"The game was important for us. It was our last home game and we had to win.

"I remember Walker's goal. There was a bit of indecision between Ginzburg and Cohen. It wasn't just a chip, it was a fair way out. We were playing formation with Alan Boath sweeping while behind Mal and I were marking the two strikers which included Rosenthal. Thev went out, played wide on the wing and made life verv difficult for us. I remember it rained very hard in the second half, typical Auckland showers, but there was a good crowd there (10,600) and they produced some of the most vocal support we have ever had. It was even better than it had been for the Australian game."

From the high of the Israel win, the All Whites went to Svdney and were outplayed 2-0. By the time they got to Israel a week later it mattered not that the locals, with Messrs Ginsburg, Cohen and Rosenthal, won 3-0, even if, as Evans recalled New Zealand did play some of its best football of the series. It could easily have gone the other way

Planning to attend World Cup USA '94

Many soccer enthusiasts from throughout the world are planning to visit the USA at the time of the World Cup - 17 June to 17 July 1994. However many will be disappointed at not being able to attend matches due to the phenomenal interest and limited availability of seats.

Already, six months before the draw to be made on 19 December, more than half the available seats have been sold and limited allocations are being made to overseas outlets. Add to this the widespread location of match venues and (by New Zealand standards) the high cost of seats, and there is only one word advice we can give - PLAN. Plan well in advance and plan carefully.

Firstly, understand just where the matches are being played! There are nine locations but not all will be used throughout the competition. The venues are -

Pasadena Rosebowl in Los Angeles
Stanford Stadium in San Francisco
Pontiac Silverdome in Detroit
Soldier Field in Chicago
Foxboro Stadium in Boston
Cotton Bowl in Dallas
Giants Stadium in New York
Citrus Bowl in Orlando
RFK Stadium in Washington

It is expected that most people will wish to attend some matches in a location they plan to visit rather than endeavour to travel throughout the USA.

Secondly, if you plan to follow your favourite team, the draw for that team will not be known until December and it is suggested that you decide now just which team you wish to follow - you may have to assume they will qualify!

Thirdly, know how the teams progress through the draw. For example group play is between 17 June and 30 June and each of the six groups will play in three locations only. Groups A and B will play in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Detroit; Groups C and D will play in Chicago, Dallas and Boston; and Groups E and F will play in New York, Orlando and Washington. The 16 teams qualifying for stage two will play in one of these centres - Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Boston, Dallas, New York, Orlando or Washington: whilst the quarter finals will be held in San Francisco, Boston, Dallas, and New York. Semi finals will be held in Los Angeles and New York, and both the 3rd and 4th playoff and the final will be held in Los Angeles. Obviously a key factor in planning to attend later matches will be the fact that results will determine just which teams are involved.

Finally, you should give serious consideration to the costs involved. Ticket prices are already known to range from US$25 up to US$475 depending on the match and the seats.

The New Zealand Football Association has undertaken considerable research on the best opportunities for New Zealanders to ensure reasonable availability of tickets and appropriate travel packages. Whether or not the All Whites qualify, we can assist those who wish to start their planning now. Indeed we urge you to commence your planning immediately to avoid disappointment at a later stage.

The NZFA will be pleased to provide advice and information on an ongoing basis to those who choose to register their interest with us.■

Southern Cross Cup

On the occasion of the New Zealand Football Association's centenary in 1991, one of its Vice Presidents, Dr Michael Starling, a long-time football administrator, presented the Southern Cross Trophy to be contested between Australia and New Zealand - on a home and away basis.

This Trophy was to replace the previous Winfield Trans Tasman Cup which was competed for during the period 1986-1989.

The agreed formula for deciding the winner is:

1. Two points for a win; one for a draw

2. If points are equal after two games, goal difference shall apply.

3. If still equal, the team scoring the highest number of away goals shall be the winner.

4. If still equal, the holder shall retain the trophy.

The present holder of the trophy is Australia.
